

About the Author

Sherry Scarpaci is the mother of two grown children whom she raised with much greater success than most of her houseplants. She collects husbands like some people might collect rare coins and old stamps. Currently between husbands, she hopes to gain custody of two of her four cats. Lullaby is her first mystery novel, which was originally published in hardback.

Sherry makes her home in the greater Chicagoland area where she is currently at work on her next novel. In addition to mystery writing, Sherry has written nonfiction articles for Woman's World magazine and the Star newspaper. Her favorite pastimes are eating Twizzlers, (Sherry thinks they should be their own food group), baking, reading, and thinking up new plots and innovative ways to kill people.